The link between depression and nutrition. Few understand the strong link between nutrition and mental health disorders such as depression and anxiety. Depression and anxiety are often thought of as mysterious disorders shrouded in shame. Depression is commonly thought to be based on a chemical imbalance or unstable emotions. Although they may well play a role, it's often nutrition that surprisingly plays a significant role in the onset, duration, and intensity of depression. Common symptoms of depression involve skipping meals, craving sweets, and having a poor appetite. In a word, the solution for depression lies within the depression itself. Prior to depression, these unhealthy habits lead to depression.

You Are Invited to the Annual Tea Party

February 10
1:00 P.M.

Women's Ministry is holding the annual teacup and saucer exchange. For you who may not have been to one of these parties, this is what we do. We each bring a gift-wrapped teacup and saucer. Inside put your name, birthday, address and phone number. The lady who chooses your gift will remember you on your birthday with a card or phone call or maybe even dinner! You will be in her prayers and thoughts often, especially when she uses the beautiful teacup from you!

Your daughters, 10 years old and older, are also invited to bring a cup and saucer gift to exchange with other young girls at their own special table.

We will serve soup and breads and tea! Our party begins at 1 P.M. on February 10. We will meet in our social hall. Please come and enjoy our time together. It's always fun!

Please remember to wash your cup before wrapping it.
